SECOND JUSTICE RESIGNS PLACE ON HIGH COURT

George Sutherland Writes To Roosevelt That He Will Retire Jan. 18

CONSERVATIVE IS 76

Veteran Follows Judge Van Devanter

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—(UP)—Associate Supreme Court Justice George Sutherland today advised President Roosevelt of his intention to retire Jan. 18 after 16 years as a member of the high tribunal.

He follows Willis Van De Vanter as the second member of the court to take advantage of the retirement act which was passed in the heat of President Roosevelt's unsuccessful attempt to enlarge the court.

The act permits retirement of justices after they reach the age of 75 at full salary of $20,000 annually.

Sutherland, one of the three staunch conservative jurists left on the high bench wrote President Roosevelt:

"I hereby retire from regular active service on the bench, this retirement to be effective on and after Tuesday, the 18th day of January, 1938."

Justice Is 76

Advanced age (he is 76) and a feeling that he no longer could continue the pace required of Supreme court justices were advanced by his friends and associates as Sutherland's reasons for retirement.

Sutherland's departure from the bench will permit President Roosevelt to name his second nominee for membership on the high bench. After four years during which he had no appointments to the court, Mr. Roosevelt named as his first choice Justice Hugo L. Black to succeed Van De Vanter.

Sutherland's retirement also strengthens the positions of the new "liberal" majority of the court, composed of Black, and Justices Charles Evans Hughes, Benjamin N. Cardozo, Harlan F. Stone and Louis D. Brandeis.

It reduces the one-time conservative majority—now the minority—to but two members, Justices Pierce Butler and James C. McReynolds. Justice Owen J. Roberts popularly is regarded as the "unpredictable" because of the frequency with which he changes his vote from the conservative to the liberal groups and vice-versa.

Hill Winner In Alabama Senate Race

Representative Easy Victor Over Tom Heflin For Black's Seat

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 5—(UP)—J. Thomas Heflin's attempted political "come-back" was lost today in a flood of votes for Rep. Lister Hill, staunch New Dealer, to succeed Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black in the U. S. senate.

Returns (complete save for scattered rural precincts) from a three-man Democratic primary showed:

Hill, 74,872.

Heflin, 39,263.

Charles Williams "dirt" farmer, 4,328.

Governor Bibb Graves is expected to appoint Hill to the senate, thus avoiding an election, when the official tabulation of the primary is completed. Mrs. Dixie Graves, his wife, who has been serving in Black's seat temporarily, will resign.

Termed New Deal Test

The primary had been considered by some observers as a test of New Deal sentiment in the deep South. Hill, an ardent supporter of the Roosevelt administration and one of the few southerners who endorsed the wages and hours bill in the house of representatives, ran on a "strictly 100 percent New Deal" platform.

GEORGE WHITE'S AIDE TO APPEAR BEFORE JURORS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 5—(UP)—S. P. Dunkle, formerly executive secretary to Governor George White, probably will be called before the special parole and pardon grand jury this week, according to Assistant Attorney General George A. Hurley.

Dunkle investigated and made recommendations to the governor on cases in which executive clemency had been asked. Former Governor White testified before the grand jury Monday.

Governor Martin L. Davey also is expected to testify this week.

C. C. Crabbe, former attorney general, and Winfield S. Pealer, an attorney, are others to be called this week.

The grand jury today resumed its inquiry into the cases of Alvan Connor, Akron, whose death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by Governor Davey, and of Kenyon V. Painter, former Cleveland banker given an "imminent danger of death" pardon.

Among the witnesses called today were Joseph H. Krebs, superintendent of the Ohio penitentiary printing plant; Fred K. Beard, captain of the prison guards, and Oscar Trubie, Xenia, whose life sentence was commuted by Gov. White. Trubie is now serving another sentence.

Principals in Michigan "Mystery"

ELOPEMENT of Trudie Bennett, 17-year-old daughter of Harry Bennett, personnel director of the Ford Motor company, caused a stir for a day after her disappearance from Michigan State Normal college, Ypsilanti, Mich. First rumors were that she had been abducted. Then it was learned she had eloped to Auburn, Ind., with Russell Hughes, 21, fellow student—and there they married. They are shown above.

Ford Executive Approves Daughter's Elopement

YPSILANTI, Mich., Jan. 5—(UP)—Harry H. Bennett, wealthy Ford Motor company executive, cried "she's still my baby" today and urged his 17 year old daughter, Gertrude, to return home with the college tap dancer and orchestra leader with whom she eloped Monday night.

"Trudy is still my baby and she is welcome home," said Bennett after kidnaping fears had been dissipated by a police announcement that the girl and Russell Hughes, 21, had been married at Auburn, Ind., by a justice of the peace.

The Ford personnel director, who formed one of the toughest secret police units in industrial history, was not too tough when he learned of the culmination of his daughter's romance.

"I am glad she is safe," he said. "I hope the guy has a job and can support her. I will do nothing to interfere with the marriage, and will help them establish a home."

Police could not learn where Miss Bennett and her husband went on their honeymoon. Bennett said that he believed they were too frightened to notify him, but was confident that he would hear from them today. Hughes, according to his stepfather, had only $6 when he left home.

News of the marriage came at a (Continued on Page Eight)

JAPAN DEMANDS MANY RIGHTS IN FOREIGN AREAS

SHANGHAI, Jan. 5—(UP)—A new and serious clash between Japanese and foreign interests was threatened today as Shanghai municipal authorities referred to the United States and British governments a Japanese demand for virtual control of the international settlement.

Foreseeing a clash of interests, the Shanghai municipal government referred the Japanese demands to the United States and Great Britain through the American and British consulates general here.

Settlement authorities planned to make no reply to the Japanese demands until they had received specific reaction from Washington and London.

Vigorously pressing an apparent campaign for domination of the foreign settlement, with its gigantic American, British and other foreign interests, the Japanese today took over operation of all radio stations and installed Japanese censors who will be ready at a moment's notice to exert control over all messages, including foreign ones.

Other suits based on the accident are those of Joseph L. Eisenberg, as administrator of the estate of Walter R. Bunn, killed in the mishap, asking $25,400, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wiggins, asking $523 for their son's injury.

Two other suits based on an accident were assigned. One was the case of Eral Porter, Athens, against Thomas and William Price, Columbus, asking $5,010. The case was assigned for Jan. 20. The case of Oscar Porter, also of Athens, against the same defendants, asking $10,760 was assigned for Jan. 24.

POLICE HUNTING THREE ROAMING IN HILL COUNTRY

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5—(UP)—Sheriff's deputies went out to San Gabriel canyon today to rescue a young couple who were reported to be roaming the mountains like animals, nude or nearly so, almost starving and held under the domination of a religious fanatic.

The officers had a warrant for Mark Silverman, 38, a shoemaker, who, according to his mother, came home one day last September, kicked open the door and shouted to the family:

"I am Jesus Christ."

Then he told the family that the world was coming to an end on Christmas eve and he was going to prepare them for it. He destroyed everything in the house. He gathered up a few scanty clothes and a bag of walnuts, loaded his mother, brother and sister-in-law into an automobile and hid them off to the canyon, where he has kept them ever since.

He set the mother, 62-year-old Mrs. Rebecca Silverman, free last Sunday because the rigors of the mountain life were ruining her health, and it was the mother's story that sent the officers into the canyon today to hunt for Mark Silverman and rescue his brother, Joe, 23, and Joe's pretty wife, Becky Silverman, 19.

DAMAGE SUITS SCHEDULED FOR COURT HEARING

Another Tarlton Bridge Trial Set Down For Monday, Jan. 17

Action of Ernest Garrett, Wayne township, against the county commissioners, seeking $10,150 damages for injuries received in a wreck at the bridge over Salt creek on the Tarlton-Adelphi road in October, 1936, was assigned for trial by Judge J. W. Adkins, Wednesday, for Jan. 17.

The Garrett case is one of four filed against the commissioners as a result of the accident. Carl Wiggins, Washington township, asked $5,000. His case was heard before a jury from Fayette county and a verdict returned for the commissioners. The suits charge that the bridge collapsed. Counsel for the county contended the car hit the bridge causing it to fall. Foreign juries were asked in the cases.

TWO-HOUR FIGHT ENDS IN BALLOT AGAINST PROBE

Two Votes Needed Despite Numerous Roll Calls In Lower House

KASCH IN OPPOSITION

Efforts To Revive Beaten Bill Are Failures

COLUMBUS, Jan. 5—(UP)—Gov. Davey's proposed investigation of "everything and everybody" appeared to be dead today without hope of revival after the house, in an unexpected "revolt", rejected a bill setting up the nine-member board of inquiry.

The bill, appropriating $100,000 for the board's expenses, was speedily approved by the house finance committee yesterday and brought to a vote on the house floor a few hours later under suspension of the rules.

There, unexpected opposition developed. In a stormy two hour debate, opponents of the measure charged it was introduced in an effort to end the senate's investigation of alleged "legal graft" in state departments.

Kasch Shouts Graft

"This is a fraud by the governor to try to block the senate's investigation," shouted Rep. Gus Kasch, D., Summit. "Creating such a board would be letting the accused pick the jury to try him."

In his "bombshell" speech before the house last Monday night, the governor proposed that three board members be chosen from each house and three selected by himself.

The governor doesn't want any investigation," Rep. Kasch continued, "because he wants to stall off any inquiry until after the next election."

Largest Peacetime Fund In History Asked For Army and Navy in 1938

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—(UP)—President Roosevelt sent to congress today the greatest American national defense budget in the peacetime history of the country, totaling over a billion dollars.

Appropriations asked for expansion and maintenance of the army, navy and marine corps for the 1939 fiscal year totaled $1,010,835,187, an increase of $77,564,287 over estimated expenditures for military purposes during the present fiscal year, and $157,779,034 above actual national defense expenditures during the 1937 fiscal year.

The huge total will not be all that will be asked for the armed services during the coming year, President Roosevelt and other administration officials have indicated.

1937 FIRE LOSS LOWEST DURING LAST 12 YEARS

Since "shooting" blackbirds removing cats from telephone poles, providing masks necessary to work on broken refrigerators and unlocking homes for residents, come under the labors of Circleville's firemen, these items are a part of Chief Taimor Wiese's annual report for council Wednesday night.

Circleville's fire loss in 1937 was the lowest in the twelve years Chief Wiese has been in the department. It amounted to only $365 or $1 a day. Sixty-six calls were answered. In 1936 the department received 89 calls and the loss was estimated at $483. In 1935, 65 calls were answered and the loss was listed at $1,090.

Five out of town calls were received in 1937. Other items of the report were: Two riot alarms sounded to call persons for service during last Winter's flood; one false alarm, 19 auto fires, one call to unlock a door, two calls for gas masks, three blackbird chasing expeditions and one call to remove a cat from a telephone pole.

During the year the department used 150 gallons of gasoline, 10 gallons of motor oil, and two cans of polish were needed to shine the truck.

The report, modestly, did not list the outstanding work done by firemen during the old toy campaign for Christmas.

Davey's Enemy

WITH Gov. Martin L. Davey, Ohio's "storm center", roaring back at anti-Davey Democrats within the state who are trying to investigate his administration, Lieut. Gov. Paul P. Yoder, above, comes in for the most bitter denunciation by the governor. The governor, appearing before the Ohio house of representatives, demanded an investigation on his own account, as opposed to the investigation voted by the state senate into alleged "legal graft". The senate investigators were named by Yoder. Governor Davey, an anti-New Deal Democrat, has been in constant altercation with New Deal supporters both in and out of the state.

CONTEST LOOMS AS F.D.R. CUTS APPROPRIATIONS

Deficit May Be Reduced, But New Relief Needs Might Alter Program

"PORK BARREL" SUFFERS

Enormous Expenditure For Defense Is Urged

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—(UP)—President Roosevelt reported to congress today that he had clamped brakes on spending in an unsuccessful effort to balance budgets dislocated by business recession.

Mr. Roosevelt estimated the net deficit for this (1938) fiscal year at $1,988,129,600 and for the 1939 fiscal year at $949,605,000—with the prospect that each actually will be greater.

He proposed pork barrel economies which invite trouble on Capitol Hill.

The President explained that recession tremendously had reduced revenue and prevented budget balancing despite economies of $397,000,000 so far this year and $938,000,000 next.

Changes Suggested

He believes business will improve some, but probably not regain its 1937 levels in 1938. He based his budget on existing tax rates but recommended changes to relieve hardships.

"I hope that there may be enacted at an early date," he informed congress, "such amendments to the revenue law as will maintain the revenue producing power of the present tax structure while correcting at the same time existing proven inequities."

He asked for a record breaking peace-time national defense appropriation of more than $1,000,000,000 and another $1,000,000,000 for work relief in the next fiscal year.

He said the national debt would rise to $38,525,200,000 by June 30, 1939.

In attributing failure to balance the budget to business recession Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that the 1938 and 1939 deficit figures are tentative and subject to considerable expansion with consequent further increase of the national debt, because:

1. "I may find it necessary to request additional appropriations for national defense."

2. "The economic situation may not improve—and if it does not, I expect the approval of congress and the public for additional funds if they become necessary to save thousands of American families from dire need."

New Taxes Alternatives

The alternative to greater deficits under those circumstances would be increased taxes.

The 1938 budget proposed reducing spending by $539,000,000, which Mr. Roosevelt regards as the most important fact in the bulky volume. This is achieved largely by cutting items dear to congress such as highways, new public buildings, new reclamation and rivers and harbor projects. Those recommendations head Mr. Roosevelt toward battle with congress which last Autumn refused even to consider the $140,000,000 highway fund reduction which he proposed again today.

Interest Payments Great

Skyrocketing national debt has created its own tremendous overhead so that this budget carries an item of $976,000,000 for interest payments, the third largest appropriation in the budget, exceeded (Continued on Page Eight)

CERTIFICATES OF TITLE BEING FILED IN COURT

Sixty two certificates of title, which replace bills of sale, have been filed in the clerk of courts office in the last two days, records of Glyn Hoover, deputy clerk, reveal.

Provide Interest

Between 1,800 and 2,000 persons from all parts of Pickaway county, nearby counties and states inspected the modern plant of the Pickaway Dairy Assn., W. Main street, at its formal opening Tuesday.

L. C. Engel, manager, and association officials were pleased by the interest shown in the new plant, one of the finest of its kind in central Ohio.

Instructions in egg candling, grading and the care of eggs and cream and milk testing and care were given by representatives of the dairy division, state department of pure foods, Ohio department of marketing, and Ohio State university. No formal program in connection with the opening was presented. Those who inspected the new building were given free ice cream cones. The entire plant was in operation so visitors were given an opportunity to watch each branch of the work done.

The new plant, 115 feet by 54 feet, has many innovations in dairy products buildings, interesting to visitors. Glass bricks were used in the construction. Use of these blocks prevents admission of dust, dirt, insects and other objectionable substances that make the production of pure products impossible. The building is air conditioned throughout and designed to provide ideal working conditions for employees.

A modern dairy store is located on the west side of the building.

N. Y. Gubernatorial Possibilities

SHOULD Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York decide not to run for re-election, and the indication is overwhelmingly such, New York's Democratic gubernatorial candidate may well be one of these men. All will be speakers at the Jackson Day dinner of the national Democratic committee in New York, Jan. 8. The possible candidates are Senator Robert F. Wagner, Postmaster General James A. Farley, Assistant U. S. Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, Controller Morris S. Tremaine and District Attorney Samuel J. Foley of Bronx county. Jackson, very much in the news these days with his anti-monopoly speeches, is said to be the choice of the pro-New Dealers. Senator Wagner would have the support of both factions.

Ohio Security Program Of Assistance to Many

COLUMBUS, Jan. 5—During 1937, thousands of Ohio's indigent aged, blind, and dependent and crippled children were brought some degree of security as a result of the state's various Social Security programs designed to assist the needy and handicapped.

Under the public assistance provisions of the Social Security Act, more than 137,000 needy and physically handicapped Ohioans received aid, made possible through the cooperative undertaking of the various governmental agencies.

Bulk of the aid went to the State's needy aged, approximately 104,600 indigent persons over 65 years of age benefitting during 1937 through this type of assistance. Payments granted the needy aged during the year totaled approximately $27,919,750, one-half of the funds coming from the federal government and the remaining 50 percent supplied by the State.

During the course of the year, the case-load of the State Division of Aid for the Aged increased about 5,000. In January 99,705 indigent aged received assistance while during December about 104,600 were listed on the rolls. The average payment per recipient was over $22 for the year, Ohio ranking among the leading states in the Union in caring for its needy aged.

A second Social Security program during 1937 rendered aid to over 27,000 Ohio dependent children and was credited as a program which in the past year saved thousands of homes from being broken and consequently saved thousands of children from becoming derelicts of society.

These children came from over 10,000 Ohio families which because of death, absence from the home, or the physical or mental incapacity of the wage-earner, faced a breakdown.

YOUTH ADMITS SLAYING WIDOW IN PHILADELPHIA

Wendall F. Bowers, Former Convict, Identified
By Fingerprints

CONFESSION ALLEGED

Arrest For Vagrancy Leads To Crime Solution

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 5 — (UP)—Wendall Forrest Bowers, 19, a deliberate, slow-speaking ex-convict, described to investigators today how he shot and killed Mrs. Wilma C. Carpenter, Philadelphia widow, while ransacking her home Dec. 13.

Although he had been in custody for two weeks on a vagrancy charge, the youth was identified only yesterday—trapped by the record of his fingerprints in the Bureau of Investigation files in Washington. Except for his criminal record and the fact that his finger prints were available, he might have been released today.

Charged with the identification last night, he admitted the crime, waived extradition and said he was willing to return to pay the penalty.

Chief of Police John Malley said the youth signed the confession after he had been questioned by Louisville police and federal agents.

Details Confessed

Bowers calmly admitted, Malley said, that he killed Mrs. Carpenter, 38, and attempted to attack Mary Griffin, 22, her companion and business associate, when they returned unexpectedly and found him robbing the Carpenter home. Then he leisurely took a bath and left.

Chief Malley announced the youth's confession, but would give no details of the crime. Bowers was held incommunicado, without bail, pending arrival of Police Chief James Ottinger of Dublin Township, Pa. He and a Montgomery county detective were expected here by plane today.

The youthful slayer will be started on the return trip to Norristown, Pa., near Philadelphia and Camp Hill, location of the Carpenter home, late today in the custody of the Pennsylvania officers and federal agents, Malley said. He will arrive at Norristown tonight or early Thursday.

Ottinger carries a warrant charging Bowers with housebreaking, murder, attempted rape and robbery.

The youth had been held in the Louisville jail since Dec. 21 on the vagrancy charge under the name of George Francis Lewis.

When questioned by federal agents he insisted his name was Lewis, despite the fingerprint identification. Finally, however, he admitted his identity and made the confession.

When he reaches Norristown, he will be brought before Miss Griffin for further identification, Pennsylvania authorities said.

Picture Identified

She previously identified him as the slayer through rogues gallery photographs.

The youth's identity was first revealed by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the F. B. I. at Washington.

Hoover said Bowers had been hunted by 11 enforcement agencies throughout the East since the slaying and assault.

John Hoover Divides His Allegiance to Two Towns

By S. D. FRIDLEY
Phone Ashville 79

John H. Hoover, a resident of this community for many years, has two homes. The one we think most to his liking is in Ashville because this is the "old home town" to him. He lived a long while at the home of Uncle Ezra Hedges. But that generation of the then youngsters has passed on and John is one of the very few who remain who can tell of the things that transpired here when he was a boy of tender years. Went to school down the railroad, to the south of the railroad bridge in a crude old building called a school house. And outside of "figgerin'" some and reading and writing, there was not much to do at school then.

Of course the big iron stove which took into its great door three or four feet-long heavy pieces of cordwood, was brought into the school room by the big boys.

His other home which he occasionally visits is with his son in Columbus. It's fine there except that his "old home cronies" are not there to while away the time with.

"Bill" Abbott, past the 80-mile-stone "down the road" (maybe up) told us some interesting history about what is yet called the "dog-town" school district, southeast of town, near Lew Hutchinson's blacksmith shop.

Elkanah Humble, yet remembered by some of the older people of the community, was the teacher and a splendid one for that day. He had asked the big boys to get in a cord or so of wood for that big iron stove. Tom Abbott being very lame from an injury he had received when a small boy, mounted, by the assistance of the other boys, a horse and with a couple of sticks of wood on his shoulder, rode into the school house and said to the teacher, "here is my share of the wood" and rode out of the house. Of course, for this kind of trick Tom felt he would get some of that "hickory oil" all the teachers kept in plentiful stock in those days of physical force teaching, so he kept away from school. But good-hearted and sensible Elkanah sent word to Tom that he should come back to school and try to get some of that education that a lame boy might badly need some day. Tom came back and "got down to business" stayed in school until he had a teacher's certificate and taught for years afterward.

AT THE CLIFTONA

A baffling murder in a big Broadway theatre, colored with black-mailing plots and complicated with an embarrassing wealth of suspects and motives, forms the basis of "Forty Naughty Girls," current thriller at the Cliftona Theatre featuring James Gleason and ZaSu Pitts in the roles of those noted detectives, Inspector Oscar Piper and Hildegard Withers.

With the crooked press-agent of the show as the victim of the killing, which takes place backstage during the performance, the story quickly becomes involved with a dozen possible suspects, all of whom had plenty of reason to have committed the crime.

The two sleuths have their hands full trying to solve the riddle. A second murder, and a spine-chilling search for the killer through the dim recesses of the theatre basement, add to the thrills of the RKO Radio offering which marks Gleason's sixth portrayal of the Inspector role and Miss Pitts' second playing of the Hildegard part.

RACIAL BRAINSTORMS

NOW it is Roumania that proposes, under a new Fascist dictatorship, to expel the Jews. This cruel movement grows like a contagious disease. Fanned by the flames of the fire that Hitler started, government after government reverts to the prejudices and short-sightedness of the Middle Ages and renews prosecution of this ancient and virile race. Even in their old home in Palestine, where they expected to find a refuge, they face hatred and war.

All this in spite of the fact that, wherever the Jews have had an opportunity to develop freely and express their natural abilities, they have made large contributions to the economic strength and the arts and sciences of the nation.

How can Roumania "expel" her million and a half of Jews? Her neighbors will not admit them, and may not even let them pass through.

The Polish government, after planning to expel the 3,000,000 Jews there, when it came to sober thinking and planning, saw no way to do it except by a general massacre, which was unthinkable. So that country seems satisfied, for the present at least, restricting social and educational rights and depriving great numbers of Jewish citizens of their means of livelihood, thus throwing them upon the charity of their blood-brethren who still have some means.

Surely a time will come when the nations engaged in such bitter persecution will be ashamed of these racial brainstorms.

PRETTY WELL OFF

A STATISTICIAN of the American Automobile Association tells us that enough people in this country spend $100 apiece on their annual vacations to make the total about $5,000,000,000. That is a goodly sum, and interesting to compare with some other figures about which we do a good deal of groaning.

The vacation money is $501,000,000 more than the estimated total of all local taxation in the United States during 1937. It is twice the estimated total of taxation by all State governments. It is only $500,000,000 less than the estimated tax revenues of the Federal government.

So what? The nation's tax burden is great. It will probably have to be greater before our national indebtedness is paid off. And yet, we are a people far from "broke." Our real national wealth, in natural resources and human initiative and skill, is great enough to carry us through a worse situation than the one we face now.

Seems as if every year does something to us, sooner or later, that makes us glad to be rid of it.

Don Marquis must have been a genius, to establish the cockroach in literature. And as for Mehitabel, the cat, we'll probably have an opera about her some day.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a sparkling morning, one of the kind that popularizes Winter. Everywhere expressions of appreciation. At the post a letter from Carl Hunter, who is sojourning at West Palm Beach. That fellow and the scrivener just can't get along. "Saw a man cross the street last evening with one twelve and one sixteen pound fish and I immediately thought of you," he wrote. "I don't know why, for I never saw you with a fish. Possibly I thought how you would like to catch a few of these and then brag in your column." Well, bragging or not, I would like to catch a few of them, or even one of them.

Chatted with Nelson Delong, who has lived on the same farm near Laurelville for 47 years. Nelson, as are most good farmers, is optimistic and believes that the world progresses steadily despite the wolf howling chorus. Anyway, he would not care to go back to the conditions that existed when he was a young man. Exchanged greetings with George Grand-Girard and the day was made better by his cheery smile. Turned a deaf ear to Bud Harden, who was encouraged by the sunshine and talked of fishing, even reporting a recent catch or two. I'll take mine in the Summer-time, mosquitoes and all.

Heard much favorable comment around the village on the President's message to congress, and more than a few chuckles over Martin Davey's flaying of his foes. Some of the smartest men in the nation declare we are headed straight for the bow wows; others just as smart declare that present federal practices will save us. Wonder how the little fellow such as the scrivener is to decide before we are saved or ruined.

Carl Mason, the furniture man, dropped in for a chat and was reasonably optimistic as to the New Year's business outlook. Bill Hart came from up Columbus way with a new account and then a salesman explained the new county credit association project that appears to have merit.

Noted a big crowd at the opening of the new Pickaway Dairy Cooperative Association plant and heard many favorable comments. Back to the office then for a session with books of the year just closed and in the late afternoon home for a light dinner and an evening in the basement workshop, just dilly-dallying. Worked up an appetite, so raided the icebox for any and all left-overs and then to bed.

HULL HAMPERED IN DOMINGO

WASHINGTON—What patient Cordell Hull is up against in the conduct of his foreign relations is illustrated by a secret situation in the Dominican-Haitian crisis. Inside fact is that the Secretary of State simply cannot rely upon his career men.

The Dominican-Haitian dispute is one of the most serious threats to Pan-American peace. About 8,000 Haitians were massacred in cold blood, some of them driven into trenches alive, drenched with gasoline and burned to death. Some were driven into the sea, some hacked to pieces by machetes.

Apparently this was done at a given signal from President Trujillo of the Dominican Republic, most iron-fisted dictator south of the Rio Grande.

Since the massacre (in early October) Trujillo has snubbed the overtures of President Roosevelt, the Presidents of Cuba and Mexico, plus the Ambassadors of Argentina, Peru and Minister of Guatemala to conciliate the dispute. Only recently he accepted a modified form of conciliation.

RADIO BUG

During all the trouble the United States has been represented in the Dominican Republic by Raymond Henry Norweb, American Minister. Mr. Norweb is a very correct young man; has the Harvard degree so necessary to the diplomatic service; pronounces tomato with the broad "a", and has been a career man all his life.

Mr. Norweb's family-in-law also owns a large interest in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, which has supported Roosevelt. When the 1936 election began to look hot, Jim Farley thought it would be a fine thing if Mr. Norweb should receive promotion. He was made Minister to Bolivia, then to the Dominican Republic.

In this capacity, Mr. Norweb has not been very useful to Secretary Hull. In fact, Norweb's chief interest in life seems to be not diplomacy, but radio. He is a radio bug. From both Bolivia and the Dominican Republic he has tended to report more on new radio developments than on war, revolution or good neighbors.

And just after President Trujillo had touched off the Haitian massacres in October, Minister Norweb insisted on going to Havana as a delegate to a radio conference. The State Department was worried about the threat of trouble at that time, but Norweb seemed so unhappy about missing his radio confab that he was finally permitted to go for a short time.

FLOOR LEADER BARKLEY

Senate Democratic Leader Barkley came in for some very severe panning during the private session between the President and the eight liberal Senators last week.

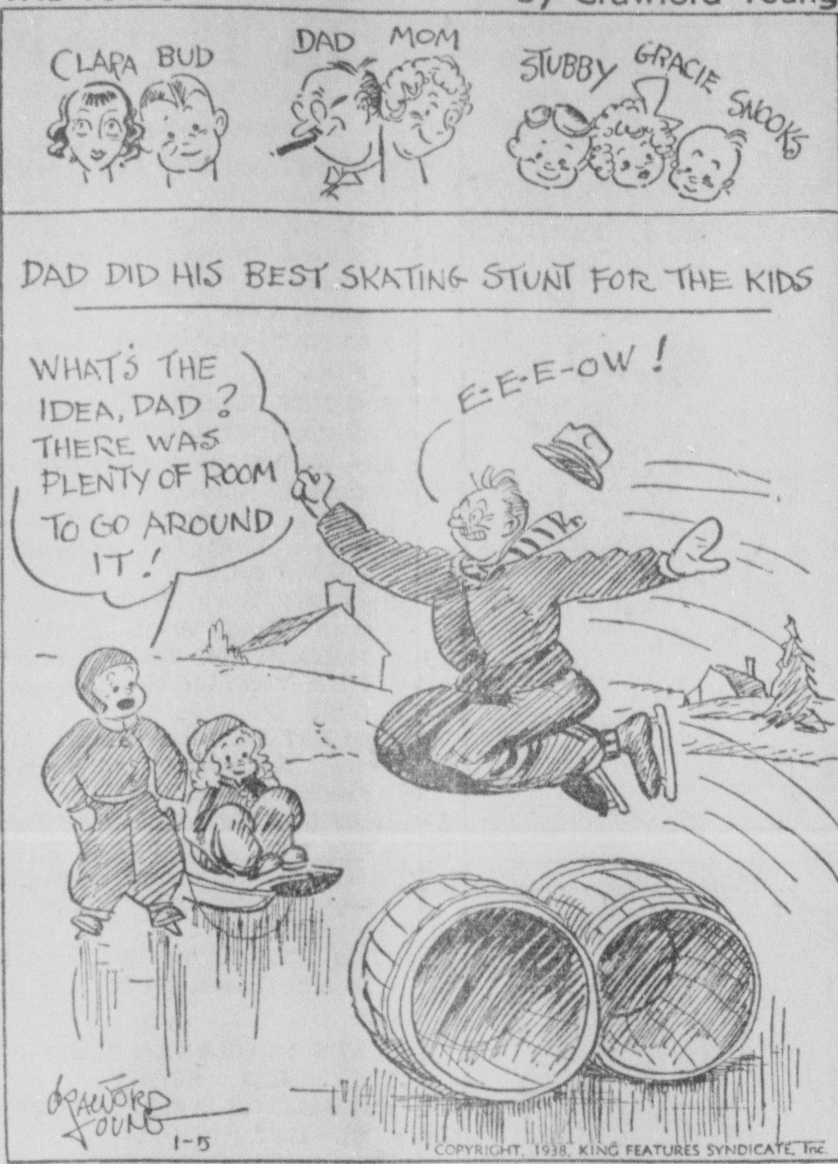

Some of the eight were particularly peeved at Barkley because of the way he let Senators Byrd of Virginia, Connally of Texas and Bailey of North Carolina get away with their anti-Administration tactics without cracking down on them. Barkley, they complained, had no fight in him.

Some observers think the policies at Washington are sound, and others think they're sound and fury.

You might say, too, that the legislative program for this special session of Congress has been air-bombed and machine-gunned.

Caring for New-Born Baby

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE PROFESSOR of diseases of children in one of our largest medical schools has written an article on the care of the new-born which contradicts most present-day conceptions.

Dr. Clendening

In hospitals, he says that about 25 years ago the practice of putting all new-born infants in one room began to be accepted as the best method. This made it easier to supply their needs by routine procedure, but the experience of years in founding homes has demonstrated that such segregation invites the dissemination of infections.

The safest place for a hospital baby is in a crib beside the bed of its mother, where a safety zone is established around both.

In the matter of bathing the new-born, the history runs like this. First, the irritating soap was discarded; then the coarse towels (using cheesecloth instead); then the cloth went and a spray bath was substituted. To avoid all the ills and infections to which babies' skins are subject, the best way is to cleanse the new-born with sterile oil soon after birth, then remove the oil with soap and water, and then leave the baby without any kind of bath for at least a week.

The prohibition against bathing should not apply to the region of the diaper, which must be cleaned several times a day with soap and water.

The best place to change the diaper is right in the baby's own bed. The nurse who changes the diapers of a number of infants at the same time always should wash her hands carefully between each one, because intestinal infections are spread that way, and often a fermentative diarrhoea develops right after the baby is taken home. An infant's stools are usually acid; a weak alkaline solution is recommended for the cleaning of the skin in the diaper region.

Only Water Given

Until the mother begins to give milk, the only thing to feed the baby on is water. The old practice of giving sugar—a sugar teat—is likely to cause loose bowels. Nature's method is regarded as imperfect, and some doctors try to stop the great loss of weight that occurs in the first three days of life by feeding. But this also may result in trouble, and the fact that so many infants are subject to food eruptions on the skin during the first few weeks of life may be the result of this.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The really big problem which is arising today is the decline in maternal feeding. Breast feeding still is the ideal thing for the infant, and every one should have the advantage of at least a few weeks of it.

CHAPTER 49

THERE IS no telling what I might have done while the idea of going to France possessed me if Hayes had not fallen ill, and two of the men left because of the loneliness.

I could get no one to take their places, so I was forced to do double duty, going shuttle-like from my desk to the work of the farm. My stories suffered because of my divided mind, and there were fewer acceptances from the editors. I came in at night dead-tired, beaten sometimes by storms, to find Mimi by the fire, quiet and composed, a purring pussy-cat or two on the hearth-rug, the table charmingly set, its orange and gray and black colorful against the golden background of flames.

Resting there, I seemed enclosed in a circle of peace. For that moment, I worked through the day. I wondered if Mimi knew how I worshiped her, as she sat, a tranquil figure, telling me the things she had read in the daily paper, but telling me nothing that was in her heart.

So December came, and Christmas. We were to have a tree for the small Hayesses. Hayes' illness had made Dora the only wage-earner in the family. The ranch supplied food and to spare for everyone, but if there were to be Christmas presents for the children, Mimi and I would have to provide them.

"I've a lot of little things," Mimi told me, "and there are yards and yards of silver ribbon on a dress I shall never wear. And we can make cherry clusters of cranberries, and pop-corn balls and chains."

"And on Christmas day, we will have the dinner here. Mrs. Hayes will come over and cook it—"

"Do you mean that you'll invite them to dine with us?"

"Of course," easily, "why not?"

Why not, indeed? But it was her initial introduction to democracy. In our first days on the ranch Mimi had looked upon the Hayesses as a queen might look upon her vassals. That she called them, now, her friends, was an evidence of a revolution in her social ideals.

"We want the biggest turkey ever," she informed me.

I laid my hand on her arm. I wanted to tell her how I adored her. She drew away, smiling but unapproachable. "We want the biggest turkey ever," she repeated, and I dropped my hand from her arm. "You shall have it," I said.

"And the biggest tree, Jerry?"

"Yes. I'll cut it myself."

But it was not, after all, the biggest tree. We chose the one we wanted several days later, as we rode over a new trail to get our first wide view of the snow-capped range.

It was late afternoon, cold, stimulating, and with the sun beginning to slant across the mountains, when we came upon a little tree, which stood apart from the others on the very top of a hill. It was a spruce, perfect in its proportions, and tipped with silvery growth. But it was not mere symmetry which caught our eyes. It was, rather, the effect given it by the sunset sky back of it—through every tip and twig and branch blazed a red glory, until they shone and sparkled as if lighted by a thousand candles.

"Jerry, look!" Mimi cried. "Did you ever see anything so wonderful?"

We watched until the light

You're Telling Me!

THE MEETING of the American Myths had been called by the Ground Hog and when the others arrived, they—Santa Claus, the Easter Rabbit, and Jack Frost—could plainly see something was worrying the meek little fellow.

"As you know," began the Ground Hog nervously, "I'm scheduled to show up on Feb. 2. Frankly, I'm worried. All this news I hear about invasions, civil wars, business recessions frightens me. I'm afraid if I come out to look for my shadow I'll somehow get mixed up in the world's woes."

"Now all you fellows have been to Earth since my last trip and I'd like your impressions. Is it as bad as I've been told?"

The Easter Rabbit sat up and cleared his throat. His eyes seemed to brim with tears but then they always looked that way. "When I delivered the eggs last March 25 I was shot at faded, and the little tree was stripped of its splendor.

"How lonely it seems," Mimi said, "perhaps it will never be lighted that way again. That was just its moment."

"Why not give it another moment, Mimi? Why not make it our Christmas tree?"

She caught at that. Our imagination met. We saw the tree triumphant in its Christmas beauty. In the evenings which followed, Mimi dressed a doll for Susie Hayes and one for Mary Hayes, and with these finished she produced a doll which so resembled herself that I stared at it in amazement.

"I am going to make it look like my peacock picture," she told me, "and send it to Bernice to be sold at the French bazaar. She wrote to me about it. And since then I've been trying to think of something that would create a sensation, and this will. They'll auction it off. I sent to Denver for a doll with hair of the right color, and I have put some of my own with it."

So artfully had she mingled her own hair with the hair of the doll's wig, that the effect was that of the headress of the painting. Lacking a jeweled comb, she had made one of the eye of a peacock's feather. With water colors she had given the doll's insipid countenance something of her own vividness.

"I shall make the dress exactly like the picture, Jerry. It will sell and they will get a lot of money for it. I know that crowd. They will say, 'It is Mimi Le Brun, to the life.' I think I'll tell Bernice to ask Olga to lend the painting. I wouldn't ask her for the world, but Bernice could."

I was still looking at the doll.

"If I'll pay you enough for your charity, will you let me keep it?" She shook her head. "You have me—"

I caught her hand. "Have I really, Mimi?"

"Well, haven't you—?" but her tone was remote, and she went on immediately. "Wait until you see her dressed, Jerry. I've used the sash of one of my gowns—" her hand was withdrawn.

But I was not to be put off. "Let me see where you put your hair."

She took out a pin or two and bent her head. On the very top the curls were short. With that tawny mane so close to me and with her eyes hidden, I lost my fear of her. I swept her into my arms.

She struggled to free herself, and at last I let her go. "Don't touch me," she said breathlessly. "It is absurd, Jerry, after all that has happened to act as if we were lovers."

"Nothing has happened which cannot be forgiven."

"It isn't a question of forgiveness, is it? It is a matter, it seems to me, of disillusionment."

She picked up the doll. "I shall have to make her slippers. Do you think you could manage high little wooden heels, Jerry?"

I was helpless before the perfection of her manner. She would have no quarrel. We sat by the fire with an effect of harmony. Yet, we were as far apart as the poles.

When the peacock gown was finished, Mimi sent the doll away, and in due time a letter came from Bernice.

"My dear, you should have seen the bidding. It sold for a thousand dollars. Olga got it, or rather the man she is to marry got it. It stood on a table in front of the portrait, and everybody was simply mad about it. I wanted it more than anything—but I hadn't the money."

When Mimi looked up from the letter, I saw that her eyes were blazing. "So Olga got it," she said, in a stifled voice. "Olga. She gets everything. She got—grandfather." She was like a hurt child. The memory of her grandfather was always a poignant one.

That night I wrote to Olga. I told her that I wanted the doll. And that I would mail her the check for it. The next morning, by telephone, I sold a piece of timber land to a neighbor who had wanted it, for a thousand dollars. Two days before Christmas I went up into the woods to cut the little tree. I had decided to walk and to take no one with me, for the men were busy, and the tree would be a light weight for my young strength.

It was clear when I started, but with a heavy slate gray sky which seemed to press close to the mountain tops.

"It looks like snow," I said. "Why not cut a tree nearer home, Jerry?" Mimi asked me.

"You liked that one, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, that settles it," I stood smiling at her, wrapped to the ears, with Jason at my heels.

The big dog wanted to go with me, but I would not let him. Mimi and Dora were alone, a storm was coming on. I would feel safer if Jason were in the house. Up through the mountains came, now and then, fugitives from justice. When our farm men were busy on the lower level, they were hard to reach.

So Jason stayed, standing wistfully beside Mimi, as I went away, and the next time I saw him my dulled eyes took him for a coyote or for a starved wolf strayed from the timber.

The wind was at my back, and I could feel the force of it bearing me up like broad wings as I made the ascent. I dreaded to think that it would beat me back when I faced it on my return.

It changed, after a time, however, and snow came with it—light flakes at first, then the steady drive of them. I was glad of the stillness after the roar of the wind, and I was glad, too, of the beauty, with the slender aspens stretching bare arms to receive their white mantles, the evergreens, their dark loveliness half-hidden by a pallid veil.

I remember I was in a somewhat solemn mood. I had arrived at a fixed resolve. When the first of the year came I would sail for France. This would release Mimi. She could go back to St. Louis without a sense of humiliation. The sale of the ranch would keep her for a time, in apparent affluence. People need never know that there had been no shining palace. The incident would be, in a sense, closed. When I returned it would be time enough to take up my own problems, and I might never come back.

But whatever came, Mimi would be proud of me. That was, after all, the peak of my desire. Perhaps, when I left her, she would see me as something besides a fool and a failure. I might even do something in France which would set me apart from other men.

Messrs. Slaughter and Hopp Coming Up Stable Doesn't Know When Horse Is Ready Bill McKechnie Sees Hope at Cincinnati

Today's candidate for the award to the most appropriately named ball player is Enos Slaughter... Enos, champion slugger of the American association last year, will join the Cardinals at St. Petersburg. While we're about it, a fleet-footed youngster named Johnny Hopp comes to the Cards from Rochester... and that seems to clean up the odd names department.

When a smart betting stable doesn't know when a horse is ready to win, who does?... What brings this to mind is the recent victory of Eschigah at Miami, paying $571 for a $2 ticket... the mare is trained by Plain Ben Jones who saddled more than 100 winners last year... "She was lame and broken down," said Plain Ben, "and I just entered her to see if she could run. She takes choppy steps and I didn't think she had much of a chance. But she got down two lengths in front, and they stuck her number up, so I guess she won."... Yep, Ben, guess she did.

Here it's still winter, but Bill McKechnie, new manager of the Cincinnati entry is on record with a violent statement to the effect that the Reds will not finish last... no telling how excited Bill will be when it's time to go south... Bill likes the pitching staff he'll have at Cincinnati, with promising youngsters like Whitey Moore and Johnny Vander Meer to go with Lefty Grissom, Paul Derringer, Gene Schott, Ray Davis and Al Hollingsworth.

That criticism heaped upon Don Budge for a poor showing in Australia recently just goes to show... the nub of the squawk was to the effect that when spectators paid $7.50 for tickets, they were entitled to a world series or something... well, Mister Budge hardly ever disappoints but I guess he's like the rest of us... now and then comes one of those bad days... and how much of that $7.50 do you think goes to Mister Budge?... you're right again... he gets a dime.

SOUTHERN METHODIST "5" INVADES MADISON SQUARE

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(UP)—Southern Methodist university, basketball champion of the Southwest conference, meets the Blackbird five from Long Island university in the feature game of tonight's double-header at Madison Square Garden.

The Mustangs, who edged Gettysburg, eastern Pennsylvania conference titleholder, in their last start will go on the court slight favorites over Long Island, loser to Marshall, Minnesota and Stanford this season.

In the other half of the twin bill Georgetown will be seeking its third straight victory over New York university's quintet which also lost to Minnesota last week.

FREDDIE STEELE FAVORED TO WIN FROM APOSTOLI

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(UP)—Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele of Tacoma, Wash., ruled an 8-5 favorite today to beat Fred Apostoli of San Francisco in their 12-round non-title match at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Steele's manager, Ed Miller, told the New York Athletic commission he wanted to be assured Steele's championship would not be at stake if Apostoli happened to come into the ring weighing less than the 160-pound division limit.

Articles for the fight called for Steele and Apostoli to weigh in at 2 p. m., although the customary time is at noon. Miller feared Apostoli might weigh a few ounces over the limit at noon, and take off enough weight to scale under the limit at 2 p. m., then claim Steele's title should be his.

Commission Chairman John J. Phelan termed Miller's fears as "ridiculous," and turned down his petition that the official weigh-in be postponed from noon to 2 p. m.

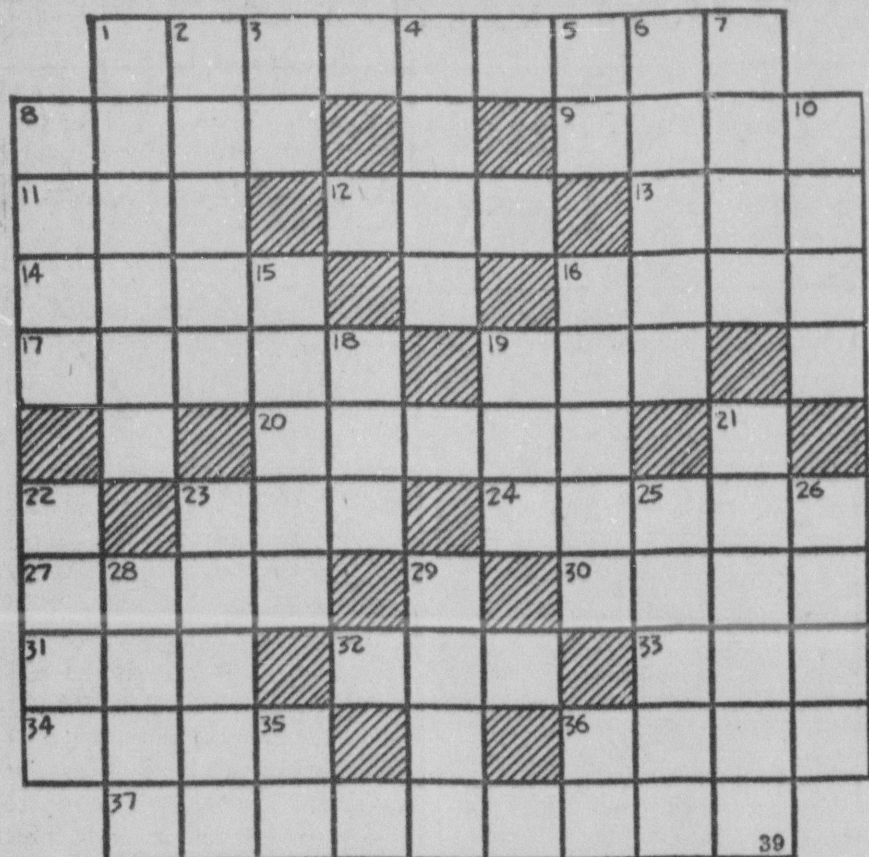

"The match has been approved by the commission as a non-title fight," Phelan told Miller. "Apostoli must weigh in excess of 160 pounds, and the commission will not countenance any such subterfuge as you suggest. Inasmuch as the fight is not for the 15-round championship distance, Apostoli cannot claim the title."

CINCINNATI AND WESLEYAN TAKE BUCKEYE TILTS

BY UNITED PRESS
The University of Cincinnati and Ohio Wesleyan took the lead in the Ohio Conference today with victories in opening basketball games over Miami University and the University of Dayton, 36 to 34 and 38 to 29 respectively.

Miami lost on its own ground at Oxford after taking an early 6-point lead. Cincinnati soon overcame the advantage and led until the last three minutes of play when Rung's foul shot tied the game at 34 all.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

DON'T BE DOLEFUL
YOU ARE not always in as bad shape as you may think, when an opponent has doubled your contract. By playing for the breaks in the location of different cards and endeavoring to get the stronger defender into the lead at the close of the hand, you may save a trick here and there until you eventually emerge with a doleful looking contract successfully made. It pays to stick to your knitting even when the cause seems almost hopeless.

and hearts were no doubt bunched in the North hand.
He covered the opening lead with the Q in dummy and South allowed it to hold. The diamond 3 was led and won by North with the A. A second spade was returned, covered by the 8, 9 and A. The heart 3 was the next lead, on which North played the 2 and dummy the 7. When South showed a void, the declarer started on clubs, by cashing the K and A and ruffing one round. A diamond was trumped by the West hand and another club ruffed. The spade 10 was led from dummy, covered by South's K, and West tossed the club J, knowing North would have to win. He did, and had to lead from his A-Q-10, giving West the trick he needed.

Next Problem

(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)
Here West opened the bidding with 1-Heart, North passed, East called 2-Diamonds, South 2-Spades, West 3-Clubs, which North doubled, and East 3-Hearts, which North also doubled.
When the dummy was exposed, after the lead of the spade J, West realized it was not going to be easy to make the contract, as the clubs
